called Neuromuscular Re-education. Dr. Kaufman was personally trained in this technique by Dr. Gary Glum, who pioneered it, and who is well known for treating the top echelon of professional athletes with Neuromuscular Re-education and Chiropractic care.

Dr. Kaufman still enjoys training and studying Kung Fu as much today as the day he began. He also enjoys the healing art of chiropractic more than ever. He has realized through his own personal training how beneficial chiropractic care has been for him by improving athletic performance, promoting the rapid healing of injuries as well as an maintaining an overall sense of energetic well being. His goal is to help his patients reach their optimum physical, mental and spiritual health through chiropractic treatments, nutrition, specific exercise and stretch programs and life style changes. If you are having pain, soreness or stiffness in the neck, mid or lower back, shoulders, arms, wrists, hands, ankles, hips, knees, ankles, feet; or are having headaches, nerve problems (sciatica, carpal tunnel, numbness in extremities), low energy, fibromyalgia; if you've been involved in automobile or work accidents – or maybe you're just stressed out and want to learn self relaxation techniques, Dr. Kaufman can help you.

He is now in practice at Toluca Lake Chiropractic, 10112 Riverside Drive, Toluca Lake

Harrison Ford May Lead Charge in Falluja Movie

Producers at Universal Pictures are developing what would be Hollywood's first feature film about the war in Iraq, with actor Harrison Ford ready to portray a U.S. general in the movie, the studio said on Friday.

The combat drama would be based on the upcoming book "No True Glory," an account of the battle for Falluja by Bing West, a Marine veteran and former U.S. assistant defense secretary now covering the war as a foreign correspondent, a studio spokesman

A Universal-based production company, Double Features, recently optioned movie rights to the book, which will be adapted by West and his son, Owen, a veteran Marine rifleman. The book is due out in May from Bantam, a unit of the Random House publishing company. Although Ford, 62, is "attached" to the project -- Hollywood parlance for a loose commitment to star in the film if it gets made -- he is not under contract, the studio said. And Universal has only given the go-ahead for development of a screenplay. No money has been earmarked for production yet.

Ford's best known roles include the swaggering

"Star Wars" space hero Han Solo and the rugged adventurer Indiana Jones in the "Raiders of the Lost Ark" series.

In "No True Glory" he would play Maj. Gen. James Mattis, the U.S. Marine commander ordered to lead an assault on the Iraqi city of Falluja, an insurgent stronghold west of Baghdad, after four Americans contractors were killed and mutilated there by a mob in March 2004.

The offensive was halted

the following month, and the Marines were withdrawn until U.S. forces renewed their assault on the Sunni Muslim city following the American presidential election in November.

While Ford would play a lead role in the film, the movie is envisioned as a broader look at the conflict in Falluja as a study of the connections between war and politics as seen through the eyes of the troops, their commanders and civilian leaders, Universal's spokesman said.

The Michael Moore documentary "Fahrenheit 9/11," which focused on U.S. conduct of the war in Iraq, was a major box office success, but "True Glory" would mark the first feature drama about the war.

Meanwhile, several Iraq war projects are being developed for TV, including a pilot series from "NYPD Blue" co-creator Steven Bochco titled "Over There" for the FX cable channel.

Movie dramas about U.S. military conflicts in progress have been unusual since World War II, with big studios tending to shy away from subject matter perceived as controversial until years after the fact.

Such was the case with such memorable Vietnam War movies as "The Deer Hunter," "Apocalypse Now" and "Platoon."

"The Green Berets, starring John Wayne," was released at the height of the conflict in Indochina in 1968. Robert Altman's "MASH," which came out two years later, was set in the Korean War but was widely seen as a commentary on Vietnam.

Angelic Oliver's Voice Dubbed by Girl-Newspaper

The speculation is over. The angelic voice of the young orphan Oliver Twist in the hit 1960s movie was dubbed by a girl, Britain's Mail on Sunday newspaper said.

Speculation has swirled for years over the origin of the piping voice given that Mark Lester who played the title part in the film has admitted to not being able to sing a note. But the Mail tracked down Kathe Green, daughter of the film's musical director John Green, who 36 years after the event said she was the voice of Oliver!

"I knew nothing about lip synching. But I did the lot in a week-and-a-half," she told the newspaper. "I was 20 and got paid about 400 pounds ($780)."

The film of the Dickens classic which won six Oscars in 1969, including best picture, cost $10 million and grossed close to $17 million -- a phenomenal amount at the time.

Lester, aged nine, beat 2,000 other boys to win the role which turned out to be his cinematographic debut and pinnacle. He now makes a living as an osteopath.
